ABOUT THE CONFERENCE

The concept of collaboration is commonly defined through five components: sharing, partnership, power, interdependency and process.

Health care involves the participation of patients, family and a diverse team of highly specialized health care professionals. Exceptional health care is facilitated by a collaborative approach including many different professionals and their clients. The partnership between providers, patients, and their families in shared decision-making, coordination, and cooperation has been defined as interprofessional collaborative practice.

Patients have complex needs that require multiple health care disciplines. Safe and effective care in today’s dynamic healthcare environment requires interdisciplinary healthcare team approach.

When health care professionals collaborate each other in health care settings, patient outcomes and quality of care tend to improve. Interprofessional collaboration among nurses, other healthcare professionals, and patients will improve patient outcomes, fewer preventable errors, reduced healthcare costs, and improve relationships with other disciplines.

OBJECTIVES

- 1 To explain the better understanding of collaboration among health care professionals.
- 2 To discuss the ways to enhance collaboration in health care to improve patient safety.
- 3 To describe value of collaboration to patients, staff and organization.
- 4 To enlighten interprofessional education and collaboration practice.
- 5 To predict future directions for interprofessional collaboration.
